BOULEVARD STRATEGY

The north-south streets running through Te Aro are important streets for getting in and out of the city.

These streets however are not performing as well as they could be. This is largely due to buildings, kerbs and footpaths not aligning, street blocks being too big, too few areas of interest and sight lines making it hard to navigate for pedestrians, cyclists and motorists. In effect these streets are merely acting as corridors rather than as spaces where people can be.

This project involves defining a clear identity and plan for each of these streets in a boulevard strategy. The strategy would be delivered incrementally depending on what developments are due to take place in these streets and what developers and property owners are willing to innovate and contribute.
