CROSS VALLEY LINKS

Wellington's central city is a place where many people work, socialise, shop and spend time and where an increasing number of us are choosing to live. The central city's open spaces – including the Town Belt and the waterfront – provide space for recreation, contemplation, and for gathering together.

Research shows that access to good quality, attractive open spaces encourages people to be more physically active and improves their quality of life. This project involves making the city's open spaces more desirable and easy to get to from the central city. It also involves making the most of the city's streets as open spaces, making them 'greener' and more attractive.
